These are the highest-impact moments for the intro/trailer — ordered by narrative arc.

BITE #	TIMESTAMP	LINE / QUOTE	PURPOSE
BITE 1	0:00 – 0:09	"I remember calling my bank... I had about $6 to my name."	Cold open. Instant relatability, stakes established.
BITE 2	0:27 – 0:38	"Today, I am a net worth millionaire. I closed on the biggest home I've ever had."	Transformation reveal. Hooks aspirational viewers.
BITE 3	0:47 – 0:50	"It was one belief I had to break."	Teaser. Creates curiosity gap — why does the episode exist.
BITE 4	4:02 – 4:17	"I hit the light switch... nothing happened. My power had been cut off."	Emotional low point. Cinematic, specific, visual.
BITE 5	4:33 – 4:45	"Anthony, I didn't turn off your lights. You did."	The gut-punch. Core message in one line.
BITE 6	5:57 – 6:07	"Income doesn't fix piss poor behavior."	Viral hook. Provocative, shareable, title-worthy.
BITE 7	7:35 – 7:58	"Income reveals character, it doesn't create it."	Quotable shift. Reframes the whole money conversation.
BITE 8	8:57 – 9:17	"You can't build wealth while drowning in consumer debt."	Shift 2 setup. Direct, actionable tension.
BITE 9	13:37 – 14:00	"Wealth is a behavior before it's a balance. Wealth is internal before you see it on a balance sheet."	Philosophical payoff. Peak-episode wisdom.
BITE 10	15:52 – 16:28	"It was 20 years of boring, consistent, faithful, good stewardship behavior."	The real answer. Hits hardest after the yacht story.
BITE 11	19:12 – 19:28	"When I walked in there, I wasn't scared. I felt free."	Emotional payoff — Keisha story climax.
BITE 12	20:32 – 20:51	"Not so you can flex. Not so you can impress strangers on Instagram. So you can be present for the people you love."	Mission statement. Powerful close for the trailer.

Key data moments and conceptual visuals to build on-screen. Each is tied to a specific timestamp.

#	VISUAL TITLE	TEXT / DATA	VISUAL TREATMENT
1	$6 to His Name (0:00–0:09)	Bank balance: $6.00 available. Working full-time. Doing everything right.	Phone screen close-up, balance fading to black. Clock: 7AM → 5PM loop overlay. Creates immediate stakes.
2	The Light Switch (4:02–4:17)	After the greatest night of his ministry, he came home to nothing.	Dark apartment. One flick. No light. Streetlight through blinds. High contrast. No text — let the moment breathe.
3	Income Isn't the Fix (6:24–6:44)	20% of households making $150K+ still live paycheck to paycheck. 65% making under $50K are not.	Split bar chart. Left: luxury silhouette with overdue bills. Right: modest home with margin. Stat fades in line by line.

4	Behavior > Balance (13:37–14:00)	"Wealth is a behavior. Wealth is mental. Wealth is internal before you see it on a balance sheet."	Animated text stack, each word fading in. Background: faint rising net worth curve. No charts — pure typography statement.
5	Debt Steals Everything (12:19–12:27)	Debt steals your money. Your options. Your time. Your peace.	Four icons: wallet, calendar, clock, family photo — each wrapped in a chain that tightens. Builds one by one.
6	5 Years Lost (12:54–13:21)	5 years of compound interest lost. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in future wealth — gone.	Timeline graphic. 5 grayed-out years. Then compound growth curve resets and rockets. Pure loss visualization.
7	The 5-Phase Escape Plan (10:12–11:33)	Phase 1: Foundation. Phase 2: Clear Debt. Phase 3: Emergency Fund. Phase 4: Invest + Tithe. Phase 5: Legacy.	Stacked progress bar or stepped pyramid. Each phase unlocks as AO describes it. Phase 5 glows gold at the top.
8	Keisha's $200K Moment (19:12–19:28)	Normal salary. Budgeted. Built emergency fund. Saved $12K/year. When her mom needed her — she was ready.	Bank account balance reveal: $200,000. Then: resignation letter, moving boxes, airport. Warm, cinematic, emotional.

5 cinematic prompts written for Veo 3. Each targets a key emotional beat in the intro. 8 seconds each, no dialogue, no music.

PROMPT 1 — The $6 Bank Call

Cinematic close-up of a young Black man in his 20s staring at a smartphone screen showing a bank balance of $6.00, dim apartment lighting, 7AM alarm clock visible in background, hollow expression, shallow depth of field, dramatic side lighting, slow push-in shot, Antoine Fuqua-inspired realism, 8 seconds, no dialogue, no text, no music.

PROMPT 2 — Lights Cut Off

A well-dressed young Black man walks through the front door of a dark apartment after an emotional night, reaches for the light switch, flips it once, nothing. Flips it again, nothing. Room holds in darkness except faint amber streetlight through venetian blinds. He stands still, looks up at the ceiling. High-contrast cinematic lighting, slow handheld camera movement, Antoine Fuqua-style tension, 8 seconds, no dialogue, no music.

PROMPT 3 — The Cheeseburger on the Kitchen Table

Tight cinematic shot of two bare hands cutting a McDonald's double cheeseburger in half with a kitchen knife on a plain wooden table, fluorescent apartment lighting, empty wallet visible nearby, deliberate and careful motion, gritty realism, shallow depth of field, handheld camera slight drift, no words, no music, 8 seconds.

PROMPT 4 — Debt vs. Freedom — Split Behavior

Split-screen cinematic scene: left side, a person exhausted at a cluttered desk covered in overdue bills and credit card statements, muted cold lighting; right side, the same person calmly writing in a budget notebook and crossing items off a debt payoff list, warm morning light, subtle financial graph softly glowing in the background, hopeful but grounded tone, no dialogue, no music, 8 seconds.

PROMPT 5 — The $200K Freedom Moment

A Black woman in her 30s packs the last box in a clean, warmly lit apartment. She places a framed family photo carefully into a bag. Then she sits down and opens her phone to a banking app showing a strong savings balance. She exhales — not with excitement, with relief. Warm natural morning light, soft focus background, cinematic realism, subtle financial overlay fades in, 8 seconds, no dialogue, no music.

PRODUCTION NOTES

- Bite 6 ("income doesn't fix piss poor behavior") is your highest-risk, highest-reward hook — consider using it as a cold open text card before AO appears on screen.
- Graph 3 (Income Isn't the Fix) and Graph 5 (Debt Steals Everything) pair best together — consider back-to-back in the data section.
- B-Roll Prompt 2 (Lights Cut Off) is the emotional anchor of the whole piece — use it to bridge the cold open into AO's face on camera.
- The Keisha story (Bite 11 + Graph 8 + B-Roll 5) functions as a standalone emotional close if you want a 90-second trailer variant.
